

Typical English - Typical German food

Full English Breakfast: Breakfast:

- bacon
- hot dog´s
- fried/scrambled eggs
- tomatoes
- beans
- champignons
(nutella)
- white – or grey bread
- black tea with milk

Full German

- hot drink(coffee)
- loaf e.g. toast
- butter
- jam, honey
- beet syrup
- nut nougat cream
- sausage
- cheese

Typical English Breakfast:

Fish and Chips is one of the popular fast food dish in the UK and every tourist should order "fish-and-chips" on a Trip to the UK.

The fries are in comparison to the German version thicker and a lot softer, also usually spiced with vinegar.

But also roast beef and Yorkshire pudding and the Indish curry chicken tikka masala are also very popular in Britain.

Typical German Lunch:

At the "Weißwurst" nobody comes by in Bavaria. Not only at the "Oktoberfest" in Munich, but together with the "Weißbier" it goes without saying, but also in Bavarian everyday life you can start the morning with white sausage, sweet mustard and a pretzel.

Typical English Dessert:

Pies are also very popular with the British - both hearty (such as "pork pie" and "kidney pie") and sweet ("apple pie" or "blackberry pie") ones.

A trifle is also a ously prevalent dessert in the UK. It consists of many tasty layers, like cream or chocolate sauce.

Typical German Dessert:

Yes, who does not know the Black Forest cake ... how could it be otherwise, the good old Black Forest! Calorie bomb per se, her trademark is the kirsch, which gives this chocolate cream cake its special taste. The special thing about this German dessert? The different layers of chocolate ground, cream and morello cherries. As a child you always wanted to eat a second piece. The resulting bruising has then taken a comforting smacking in purchasing.